Falling into Learning

September was a busy month in Pre-K! The children have already learned so much! Our classes established and practiced school procedures, routines, rules, and safety. They learned their teachers' and classmates' names and are learning how to play together. They are also becoming more independent in the classroom and with daily routines (cleaning up, taking on/off jackets, serving themselves, etc.).

In October, we will begin our Fall study! We will be building upon the natural curiosity and excitement young children have for the world around them. Throughout the month, the children will be observing changes in the trees, examining plants and animals living in and around the trees, and experiencing the changes in the weather. You can help at home by taking a walk around your environment and talking with your child about all these changes, as well as, touching/feeling the trees and leaves around them!
